

Questions for primary sources:

Analyze your primary source by thinking like a Historian, Geographer, and Economist

1. Historian
 - a. What is the historic significance of this source?
 - b. What is different in this source than in something that came from today?
 - c. When is this source from? What was happening in Colorado and the United States at the time of this source?
 2. Geographer
 - a. What place names are mentioned in this source?
 - b. Where is the source from? How do you know? What region of Colorado is it from?
 - c. How did the people in the source alter their environment?
 3. Economist
 - a. What is the economic impact of this source?
 - b. What examples of goods and services produced in Colorado are shown in this source?
 - c. Which productive resources are shown in this source – natural, human, or capital?
-

Questions for primary sources:

Analyze your primary source by thinking like a Historian, Geographer, and Economist

1. Historian
 - a. What is the historic significance of this source?
 - b. What is different in this source than in something that came from today?
 - c. When is this source from? What was happening in Colorado and the United States at the time of this source?
2. Geographer
 - a. What place names are mentioned in this source?
 - b. Where is the source from? How do you know? What region of Colorado is it from?
 - c. How did the people in the source alter their environment?
3. Economist
 - a. What is the economic impact of this source?
 - b. What examples of goods and services produced in Colorado are shown in this source?
 - c. Which productive resources are shown in this source – natural, human, or capital?